

She's not chasing a cleanse. She wants to feel normal again.

By the time she finds you, she's tried everything, been let down by all of it, and quietly stopped believing anything will work.

93% female

Age 45–64

UK

Core pain: constipation

Sceptical by default

Buys on feeling

Every line on this page is a real customer's own words — pulled verbatim from your Trustpilot reviews, order reviews, and the language bank. Nothing here is paraphrased. Read it out loud to get inside her head before you write.

THE EMOTIONAL ARC

How she travels — from stuck to loyal

Follow the temperature. It starts hot with the problem, cools into resignation at the low point, then warms green as relief and trust take over. Creative can enter at any stage — but she has to recognise herself in it.

STAGE 01 · THE STRUGGLE

This has been going on for years

Constipation is the fact of her life — not a bad week, a permanent state. She measures it in days and years, not hours. This is the ground everything else sits on.

I have had chronic constipation for many years & it can be two weeks before I have a proper bowel movement.

After decades of being constipated. You name it I tried it.

I've always had issues with bowel movements for as long as I can remember.

I was in constant pain from being so blocked up.

I struggle to go naturally and have tried all sorts of things to help.

She says it plainly: “backed up.” “Bunged up.” “Blocked up.”

STAGE 02 · THE FELT LAYER

But what she feels is heavy, bloated, sluggish

Constipation is the diagnosis. Bloated and heavy is the sensation she lives in all day. This is the difference between naming the problem and making her feel understood.

Still feeling bloated, full and sluggish. Hopefully this will get better.

I always went to the loo regularly but never felt "empty".

No more heavy sluggish feelings.

No more discomfort for days on end.

FOR CREATIVE

Lead with the fact, agitate with the feeling.

Name constipation in the hook (it converts) — then twist the knife with bloated, heavy, never empty. That's the felt layer she recognises in the mirror.

STAGE 03 • THE GRAVEYARD

She's already tried everything you're about to suggest

Water. Fibre. Fruit. Laxatives. Prune juice. The whole chemist aisle. Even the hospital. Assume she's ahead of you — and that the ones that "worked" all quietly stopped.

I have tried various pills & herbal remedies etc but nothing has worked.

More water. More fibre, more fruit and laxatives. You name it I tried it.

Been so bunged up, had the prune juice and laxatives daily.

Tried all the supermarket and Chemists usual products.

I have tried so many products... they work at first then gradually stop doing anything.

Even having been to hospital to try and fix the issue.

Over the last few years I've spent £100's on different tablets for constipation and constant painful bloating.

FOR CREATIVE

Name the graveyard out loud.

Listing what failed her — water, fibre, prune juice, laxatives — earns instant belief. It proves you know her, and sets up the killer line:
"worked when nothing else did."

STAGE 04 • THE WALL

So of course she doesn't believe you

The low point. She's not hopeful — she's braced for another let-down. "Sceptical" isn't an objection to overcome; it's her resting state, and it's her most-used word in the entire review set.

I'll be honest — I was deeply sceptical that this would work, after years of chronic constipation.

I was sceptical at first, thinking it would be another brand claiming things worked naturally.

I wasn't convinced it would do all it says.

I didn't have high hopes when I ordered, having tried several alternatives.

I was a bit dubious that these would live up to the strong reviews, and be another thing I bought via socials that wasn't very good.

FOR CREATIVE

Don't fight the scepticism — say it for her.

"I was sceptical at first, but..." is her exact arc. Opening on her doubt (a review-style, contrarian hook) disarms it faster than any claim. "Actually" is your highest-signal word — it means she didn't expect it to work.

STAGE 04½ • THE FEAR UNDERNEATH

And she's scared of getting hooked on the fix

Even wanting relief, she's wary of trading one trap for another. Dependency is a live fear — trigger it and you lose her; reassure it and you win.

I worry that I will become reliant. That's not great.

I didn't want to be on laxatives forever.

They work at first then gradually stop — will this one too?

FOR CREATIVE

Frame it as daily support, never a crutch.

Lean on gentle, natural, keeps me regular — the language of a habit, not a rescue. Avoid anything that sounds like a laxative she'll be chained to.

STAGE 05 · THE TURN

Then — fast, gentle — it actually works

The unlock. Speed plus gentleness. It moves in days, sometimes hours, without the cramping and pain the laxatives gave her. Surprise is the dominant emotion here.

Within 48 hours it worked, very gentle with no stomach cramps. What a game changer.

Within 24 hrs of starting... I had movement!! No pain or cramping.

After about 4 days I have started pooping normally, no straining and no pain.

This product actually works. I was sceptical at first.

Amazing product that worked when nothing else did.

My body seems to get used to them and quickly lose their efficacy. Wild gut seems to work consistently.

The stuff works without tying your guts in knots, which has been my experience with laxatives.

No pain either, so definitely not a laxative — I'm very sensitive to anything harsh.

STAGE 06 • RELIEF

Light, regular, in control — for the first time in years

What "better" actually feels like to her. Not a dramatic detox — the quiet return of normal. These are the exact emotion-words to own in transformation copy.

Feel so much lighter and less sluggish. Love these.

Regular for the first time in a long time. I can't thank you enough.

No more bloating, just normal daily function.

This is the first product that is gentle, still makes me feel in control and actually works.

I now go every morning, and if I miss a day, I know it's not going to be painful.

The whole promise, in her words: “actually NORMAL for the first time in years.”

STAGE 07 • THE NEW NORMAL

Now she can't be without them — and wishes she'd found you sooner

Identity and habit. It's part of her routine, she's on her third bottle, and the regret is telling: she wishes she'd found it earlier. This is your retention and referral engine.

Wild gut has completely changed my life, no exaggeration.

These are an absolute godsend. This is my third purchase and I don't let myself be without them.

Part of my daily routine for the foreseeable.

So wish I'd found it earlier! / Wish I had known about this sooner.

I rely on them now. I'm at the maintenance stage.

FOR CREATIVE

"Game changer" and "godsend" are hers — use them.

They came unprompted, over and over. So did "wish I'd found it sooner." That regret is a powerful hook for the still-suffering woman scrolling past.

HOW SHE ACTUALLY SAYS IT

Her words, not marketing's

The raw vocabulary, sorted by where it lives in the arc. Drop these in verbatim — the second you "improve" them into brochure language, she stops recognising herself.

● THE PROBLEM

- “ Backed up / bunged up / blocked up
- “ Chronic constipation for years
- “ Struggle to go naturally
- “ Bloated. Heavy. Sluggish.
- “ Never felt empty
- “ Dreaded going to the toilet

● WHAT FAILED HER

- “ Tried loads of things
- “ More water, more fibre, more fruit
- “ Prune juice and laxatives daily
- “ Nothing has worked
- “ Work at first then stop
- “ You name it I tried it

● HER GUARD UP

- “ Sceptical at first
- “ Deeply sceptical
- “ Didn't have high hopes
- “ Wasn't convinced
- “ Another brand claiming...
- “ Worry I'll become reliant

● WHAT RELIEF FEELS LIKE

- “ It actually works
- “ Feel lighter
- “ Keeps me regular
- “ Gentle — no cramps, no pain
- “ Emptying completely
- “ Normal for the first time in years

● DEEP LOYALTY

- “ Game changer
- “ Godsend
- “ Miracle pills
- “ Changed my life
- “ Can't be without them
- “ On my third bottle
- “ Wish I'd found it sooner

● THE WARNING-AS-PROOF

- “ Stay close to a toilet
- “ It really clears you out
- “ Be close to a toilet when you take them
- “ You'll be running to the loo

THE WOMEN UNDERNEATH THE AVERAGE

Five sub-groups worth a hook of their own

"45–64 UK female" is the average — but these specific situations show up again and again, unprompted, and each is a ready-made angle.

On GLP-1 (Mounjaro / Ozempic)

"I'm using weightloss jabs, and experience constant constipation. These have got me back into a great routine from the first pill."

HER WORD: "JABS" · ACTIVE FUNNEL ANGLE

Post-surgery

"Never had regular bowel movements in a long time since I had my gastric sleeve surgery."

WEIGHT / BARIATRIC CONTEXT

Medication-induced

"18 months of constipation caused by drugs for my illness... found your colon reset and it works."

ANTIBIOTICS · ILLNESS MEDS

IBS-C & IBS-D

"I have IBS and have struggled for so many years — this is the first product that actually helps me."

CHRONIC · DEBILITATING

Older & lifelong

"70yrs old and always been constipated, to the point that I dreaded going to the toilet."

DECADES OF STRUGGLE

PIN THESE ABOVE THE DESK

What it means for creative

The mindset above, distilled into rules you can hold a hook against.

1 Constipation is the entry, bloated is the twist

Name constipation in the hook — the data says it out-converts bloating. Then agitate with the bloated / heavy / never empty feeling she lives in.

2 Meet her scepticism, don't argue with it

"Sceptical at first" is her default, not an objection. Open inside her doubt and let the result surprise her. "Actually" is your tell-tale word.

3 Recite the graveyard of what failed

Water, fibre, prune juice, laxatives, the chemist aisle. Listing them proves you know her — and sets up "worked when nothing else did."

4 Gentle + natural is the wedge against laxatives

Her fear is dependency and cramping. Gentle, natural, no pain, keeps me regular is the exact contrast that separates you from everything she's tried.

5 Sell "normal," never "detox"

She wants regular, light, in control, normal for the first time in years — the quiet return of ordinary. Not a cleanse, not a finish line, a daily habit.

6 "Wish I'd found it sooner" is a hook, not just a review

The regret of loyal customers speaks straight to the woman still scrolling and suffering. Her happy ending is your best cold-traffic opener.

Built from WildGut customer voice — Trustpilot reviews, order reviews & messaging playbook language bank.

Every quote verbatim. No paraphrasing. · Colon Reset · UK

Last refreshed 19 Aug 2026 · Trustpilot 4.4 · 179 reviews